

Artistry presenter speaks out – see page 76

hanley wood

Daily News

January 22, 2008

Las Vegas

Seeing the other dam side

For three quarters of a century, the Hoover Dam has been celebrated as a marvel of American concrete construction and design. On Sunday, World of Concrete attendees got an up-close look at the highway project that's transforming the national landmark.

For the third annual Editorial Tour, participants veered off the paved road to the Hoover Dam Visitors Center and traveled to the Arizona side of the jobsite for a unique view of the bridge being built over the Colorado River. The bypass project—about 1500 feet downstream from the dam—is designed to help alleviate traffic that has for decades snarled around the Hoover Dam and caused headaches for area residents and visitors.

Rough road ahead for concrete construction in 2008: expert

Ed Sullivan is known for being on the mark.

The chief economist for the Portland Cement Association (PCA; Booth C4113) has been named Most Accurate Forecaster a number of times by the Chicago Federal